1. A general meeting of the Algerian Tramway workers was held on 27 March 1953. The CGT leaders attempted to instigate a strike as a protest against the arrest and imprisonment of French Communist Party militants in Paris. The tram workers refused to participate in this maneuver, a majority of the delegates affirming their intention of striking only if their collective agreements are violated.
2. Because only eighty out of a total of two thousand employees attended the meeting, no decisions of significance were made. The next meeting was scheduled for 3 April 1953.
